

CONSPIRACY

Exists Between Her Daughter and Her Son, Says Mrs. McGlaughlin

Newark Woman Made a Remarkable Statement Monday

Coming to Defense of Her Son-in-Law, Wm. Vermillion, Now in Jail at Indianapolis—Statement and Letters Show a Frightful State of Affairs.

The arrest of William H. Vermillion at Indianapolis, but formerly a Newark resident, on the charge of attempting to poison his wife, Mary Vermillion and their children, by giving them poisoned candy, develops a story of depravity, on the part of his accusers, that is almost beyond conception and incapable of belief.

It is unique in its shocking details, and yet its publication becomes necessary to free a man from the consequences of a crime, which it is probable that he never committed.

He now languishes in a jail in Indianapolis with the charge of attempted murder hanging like a pall over his head, a victim of a conspiracy, hatched it is alleged, in the evil and degenerate minds of his wife and her half brother.

This conspiracy had its inception in the unholy desire of Mary Vermillion, and her half brother, Edward Elliott, and her half brother, Edward Elliott, and her half brother, Edward Elliott.

This is the opinion of Mrs. Martha McGlaughlin, who lives with her son, Miles Elliott at the rear of 240 East Main street. Mr. Elliott is boss boiler washer at the B. & O. shops, and he and his wife are eminently respectable residents of East Newark. Mrs. McGlaughlin is a woman of intelligence and innate refinement. She is almost distracted over the situation at Indianapolis, and the events leading up to it, which she related to the Advocate at her home this morning.

She is the mother of Mrs. W. H. Vermillion and also of Edward Elliott, and her grief and sorrow as she related her pathetic story was, indeed, sad to behold. Mrs. McGlaughlin said:

"I was first married to Amaziah Elliott, and by him I had eight children, four being still alive. They are Eddie, a carpenter, the one now in Indianapolis. John of Henning, Illinois, and Miles of Newark. Isaac, I do not know his whereabouts but he is still alive. About 31 years ago Elliott and I were divorced. He is now over 90 years of age and lives at Henning with his son John.

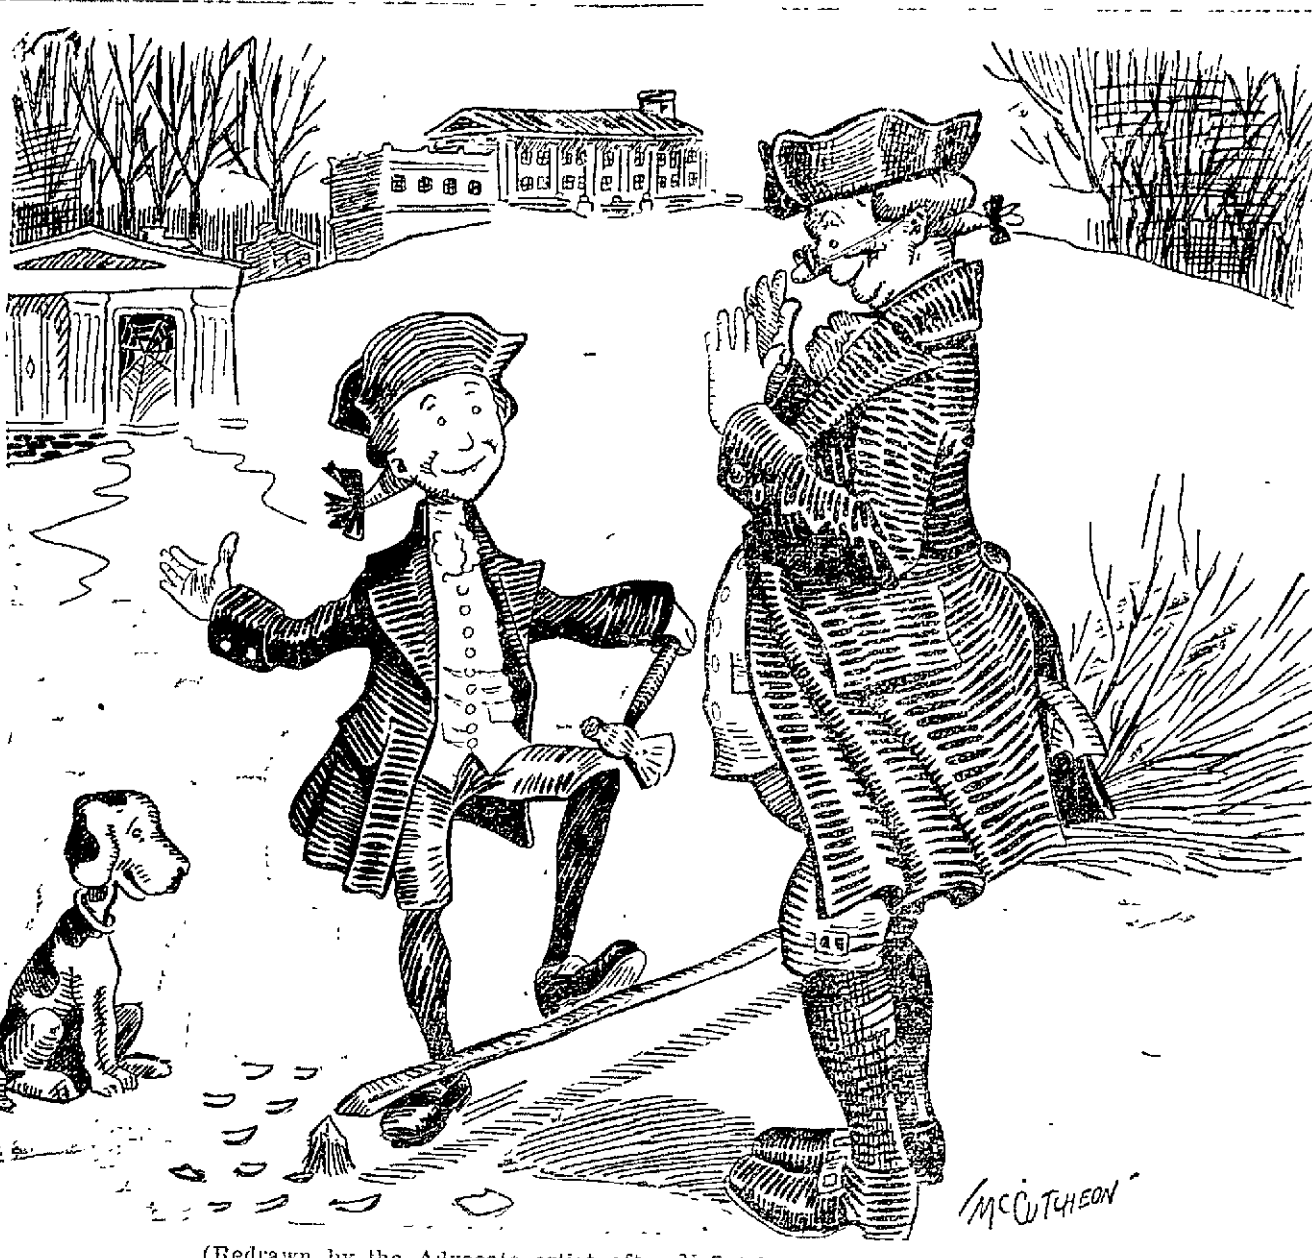

"Two years later I married James McGlaughlin and if this marriage there are four children living. Walter of Columbus, who was last night married in Zanesville to Miss Mary Carter; Mrs. Matilda McGlaughlin of 332 North Sixth street, Zanesville. Mrs. Mary Vermillion, whose address, until she went to Indianapolis last December, was 120 East Second street, Mansfield, and Samuel McGlaughlin, who lives in Zanesville.

"My second husband was killed 2 years ago last August in a boiler explosion in a sawmill at Glenford.

"After my second marriage, my children by the first husband became separated from me, and Edward, I had not seen for 30 years, until last November 29.

"Mary, now about 27 years old, had married William H. Vermillion and was living happily with him at the address in Mansfield, which I gave you. Last September a peddler came to her house, and noticed a picture on the wall of my son Miles Elliott. The peddler asked whom it was a likeness of, and was told that the picture was of her half-brother, Miles Elliott of Newark, Ohio.

"The peddler said he knew a brother of some near relative of the man represented by the likeness, which was a striking counterpart of the man in

MURDEROUS

ASSAULT MADE SUNDAY NIGHT ON EDW. BROADWATER

White on Eighth Street was Struck a Vicious Blow With a Club—Desperate Struggle.

Edward Broadwater, a glass blower, was murderously assaulted on Eighth street, between Church and Main between seven and eight o'clock Sunday evening.

While walking along the west side of Eighth street, a man jumped out from the alley and struck a vicious blow at Broadwater, which hit his stiff derby hat. The weapon used was a palling and the hat protected the victim from serious injury. Mr. Broadwater grappled with his assailant and the latter drew a gun, for which the two struggled desperately. As it was wrenched from the highwayman's hand the pistol was discharged, the bullet grazing Mr. Broadwater's face. The would be murderer then ran and Broadwater, picking up the revolver which had fallen to the ground, shot at the retreating figure, but the man made his escape.

Mr. Broadwater found that he had lost his gold watch in the scuffle, but upon returning to the scene, it was recovered where it had fallen.

SUNDAY EGGS

Will go to Pay Off Debt of a Church in a New York Town—Church Needs Money.

New York, Feb. 23—The bells of Little Utea, a community about five miles from Baldwinsville, N. Y., are going to work Sundays this year to pay off a church debt.

Little Utea has one church, but it is desperately in need of money. It is in a farming community and all the church members are farmers. At a last meeting one of the congregants suggested that each member should contribute all the eggs laid by the hens on Sundays during the next year and give the money the eggs would fetch to the church. Every body agreed and the bells will begin to ring today.

ANOTHER

ROYAL SCANDAL IS REPORTED FROM OLD WORLD.

Paris, Feb. 23—Another royal scandal is reported today from Cairo. Princess Djemil Tousson, sister of the Khedive and wife of Prince Djemil Tousson, recently made an attempt at self-destruction by taking poison.

The desperate act, which happily proved unsuccessful, is said to have been prompted by jealousy.

The Princess subsequently left Egypt on board one of the royal yachts, refusing to see her husband. Her Highness went by way of Trieste to Vienna, where it is said she is about to wed an Austrian Count.

A divorce has already been granted, such matters following a very summary and expedition course in Egypt.

The Princess, who is only 29 years old, has a boy aged 5 and is owner of a beautiful palace in Cairo, which is her own indisputable property. Her husband is inconsolable at the loss of his beautiful young wife.

SHIP SUBSIDY

Now Has No Show at This Session of Congress at Least

Committee by a Narrow Margin Refuses to Report Bill

Two Members Voted Against it on Ground There Would Not be Time to Consider the Measure—How the Members Voted.

Washington, Feb. 23—The House Committee on merchant marine and fisheries by a vote of 10 to 7, today refused to report the ship subsidy bill. This action disposes of the matter so far as this session is concerned.

Mr. P. Vreeland of New York, was the only absentee at today's meeting. But with his consent he was voted in favor of reporting the bill. Those on the same side were Messrs. Grosvenor, Littlefield, Washner, Greene Young and Fordney, all Republicans. Those opposed to reporting the bill were Messrs. Hopkins, Miner, Stevens and Jones, Republicans, and Davis, Spight, McDermott, Belmont, Snook and Small, Democrats. Mr. Jones of Washington, tried to have the bill amended in several particulars, but failing in this voted against it. Mr. Bodkins and Mr. Miner declared their opposition on the ground that there would not be time at this session to consider the measure.

STATEHOOD BILL.

Washington, Feb. 23—Barring details the statehood compromise plan to be introduced in the Senate today is to admit two states, one now Oklahoma Territory, with contiguous portions of Indian Territory, where lands have already been allotted in several states and New Mexico and Arizona, under the name of Montezuma with a provision that when two sections shall have attained a certain population they shall become two separate states. Indiana Territory is also to be separated from Oklahoma and become an independent state when it has a stipulated population.

The treatment consists of a special preparation of colloidal silver mixed with vaseline. The preparation is rubbed into the skin thus entering the circulation. It has already been successfully tried in case of typhoid, diphtheria, scarlet fever, cerebro-spinal meningitis, muscular pneumonia and other diseases.

WARRANT

Issued at Delaware Charging Prominent Farmer With Starving His Cattle and Pigs.

Delaware, O., Feb. 23—An unusual case of cruelty to animals was reported to the Humane Society of this city and resulted in a warrant being issued for the arrest of O. Carson on a charge of starving his cattle and pigs on a 100 acre farm four miles south of this city. Carson has a large amount of live stock on his farm which neighbors claim he is starving to death.

One farmer residing in this vicinity states that one of Carson's cows, which was weak from lack of food, fell to the ground and was unable to get up. Carson refused to feed her, and that an army of starving pigs charged upon the cow and killed and devoured it. The officer shown to the Carson farm to see the warrant stated on his return that while investigating the condition of affairs at the farm he found a young steer dead in the barn and the balance of the pigs in a starving condition. Prominent local farmers are well known in Delaware, and his friends are at a loss to account for the present state of affairs in not a word about one of his farm, which heretofore has been considered a model place.

The fate of Trust Buster Littlefield, who is hooted and made a target for brickbats every time he pokes his nose out of his hole, demonstrates anew the unwisdom of putting one's faith in princes. Mr. Littlefield was foolish enough to believe that Colonel Roosevelt really wanted to make things hot for the trusts and the wrought to that end. Note his finish.

In refusing to leave his judicial duties to accept invitations to political dinners in various parts of the country, Judge Alton B. Parker is showing much wisdom. There is no occasion for speech making just now and Judge Parker knows that it is not becoming in a presidential candidate to go gallivanting about the country in furtherance of his political interest.

TRY IT ON OTHER MONOYOLIES.

When the Republican majority in Congress consented to rebate the duty on coal for one year it was with the hope and expectation that the action would not disturb the monopoly enjoyed by the American coal barons.

So distinguished an experiment of the protection gospel as Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania openly declared that he voted for the proposition because he was certain that it would accomplish nothing toward bringing foreign coal into the country. Even congressmen who sincerely advocated the measure were somewhat doubtful as to its efficacy in curbing the extortion of the coal trust.

Nevertheless it has had that effect, on the Atlantic coast at any rate, where the arrivals of British coal have begun to affect the situation in the way of lowering prices. In Boston harbor alone there are vessels with 60,000 tons of coal on board and we may presume that even larger shipments are arriving at New York. That is to say, the removal of the tariff on coal—which is what the rebate amounts to—has encouraged British mineowners to seek an American market and in doing so they have compelled the coal barons to loosen their grip upon the throat of the American consumer.

If that has been done with respect to the coal monopoly it can be done with other monopolies which now enjoy predatory powers solely by the grace of the prohibitive tariff. The duty on coal was relatively insignificant, yet, as we have seen, it helped the coal barons materially in their comprehensive schemes of plunder.

The tariff is the mother of the trusts. It is time that the infant industries were weaned.

ROOSEVELT=HANNA NEGRO VOTE HUNT

(New York American.)
President Roosevelt's monopoly as a player to the colored gallery has been destroyed. Senator Hanna has bounded onto the stage and demanded his share of Afro-American attention and applause. It is fully understood by the whole white population of the country that either gentleman is willing to make any sacrifice of dignity in return for Southern delegates to the next National Republican Convention.

The contest between the two for the favor of their fellow citizens of African descent has its comic aspect, of course, but only the light-minded will care to dwell on the ludicrous side of such a degrading tug-of-war between the President of the United States and the leading Republican Senator, his rival for the nomination in 1934.

Mr. Roosevelt, professing the very noblest motives the while, appoints negroes to office in the South and takes every occasion to rebuke Southerners for not liking too intimate personal contact with a race whom they regard as their equals. This policy appeals to the pride of the blacks, and the President has calculated that in exchange for "recognition" the negroes will flock to the polls in his behalf when the time for electing delegates arrives.

But now comes Senator Hanna with a bill providing for the pensioning of every ex-slave, a measure that would take hundreds of millions from the treasury in order to become a law. Nobody better than Senator Hanna knows that there is not the remotest possibility of his bill ever becoming a law. There is not the least probability that it will ever be brought to a vote in this or any other Congress. But that does not concern Mr. Hanna. What he is after is popularity on the plantations and in the back alleys of Southern cities, where Mr. Roosevelt of late has been having it all his own way. The poor black man may be grateful to the President for giving a collectorship and a postoffice or two to colored citizens, but what is such "recognition," however flattering, in comparison with the promise of a Hanna pension for himself or one of the family?

The people of the South have a right to be indignant at this truckling to the negroes by a brace of politicians.

Taken Orders.
When Miss Lucy wanted particularly fine chickens, she always drove over to see old Aunt Etta, who had a scarp of a farm and made a specialty of raising chickens for the quality folks.
One day, as the lady stopped in front of the cabin, Aunt Etta came out and having over the gate.
"Chicken!" she exclaimed in answer to her customer's request. "Chicken! Why, how, Miss Lucy, don't you all know there's been a camp meeting and preachers' conference down here? Why, I can't get one chicken left! They're all gone to enter the ministry!"—Lippinott's.

Great men should think of opportunity and not of time. Time is the excuse of feeble minded and puzzled spirits.—Disraeli.

citizens whose ambition appears to have put their scruples sound asleep. No one who has any understanding of the conditions in the Southern states, where there is a large African population, can refrain from actively sympathizing with that indignation, Messrs. Roosevelt and Hanna are playing with fire, a fire which once started may devastate many Southern communities. They are selfishly and consciously trifling with a very grave matter—adding enormously to the difficulties of an already sufficiently burdensome preferment, social equality and material advantages that can never be realized.

President Roosevelt and Senator Hanna are intelligent men. They know perfectly well what must be the effects of their loss for negro popularity. They are engaged, for political purposes, in stirring up the blacks against the whites of the South.

That is a sinister business. Not only is it to the last degree discreditable to the President and the Senator as public men, but it is highly dangerous—so dangerous that it becomes the duty of patriotic men throughout the Union, regardless of party, to lift their voices and order a halt.

The South is a part of our common country, and as such as well entitled to internal peace as is any other part. For outside politicians to disturb its quiet and threaten its safety in order that they may further their personal ends in a national convention, is simply infamous. If the Chinese of the Pacific Coast were fifty times as numerous as they are, and had votes, and Roosevelt and Hanna, for the sake of delegates, should endeavor to rouse the yellow men against the whites there, that would be a precise parallel to what Roosevelt and Hanna are doing in the South.

Every real friend of the negro, every enemy of race hatred, every foe of sectionalism, and every citizen who cares for the dignity of the Presidential and Senatorial offices must deplore the course of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hanna. Their rivalry as aspirants for the presidency has carried them beyond all permissible bounds. While they alarm and incense the South, they humiliate the United States by debasing our politics to a level that puts us to shame before the civilized world.

UNIQUE BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Alfred A. Howlett, a wealthy merchant and contractor of Syracuse, celebrated his eighty-second birthday the other afternoon in a unique way by giving a reception and banquet to nearly a hundred widows of his acquaintances, says the New York Herald.

The affair might appear somewhat eccentric, but in planning it Mr. Howlett was simply carrying out the idea of assembling friends of his youthful days and likewise those of his lamented wife. With the exception of a small colored page Mr. Howlett was the only male in the house during the function. Mr. Howlett had even granted his janitor a leave of absence and in his place installed a butler widow.

The guests began to arrive soon after 3 o'clock. They were received by Mr. Howlett and his granddaughter. When all had arrived, the banquet was spread. Mr. Howlett occupying the post of honor as perhaps the first known man to sit down with 100 widows. Widows presided at the tables. A widow was caterer, and the leader of the women's orchestra also were the weeds.

At 7 o'clock a guest, magnificently dressed, wearing a Persian lamb coat and carrying an emerald muff, with what appeared to be striking gray hair and face rouged and powdered, was introduced to Mr. Howlett as "Mrs. Bain of Philadelphia." Mr. Howlett was puzzled, as he did not quite recognize the guest.

"Mrs. Bain" was introduced about the house, and Mrs. John Lawrence of Albany asked the strange visitor about some friends in Philadelphia, all her questions being answered satisfactorily. It was an hour before Mr. Howlett discovered that the intruder was none other than his own grandson, Marshall Durston, who is a young social leader in Syracuse. He was quite the "belle of the ball."

For birthday presents there were pictures of Gibson's "A Widow and Her Friend" and books with suggestive titles like "To Have and to Hold," "After Lord and Master" and "When a Man's Single." There was an engraving of an old man knocking on a widow's door, with an enormous bouquet in his hand.

JOKE ON ROOSEVELT.

How the President Mistook a Delegation of Irishmen For Germans.

There was an incident at the White House the other day which afforded the president great amusement, although the joke was on him, says a Washington special to the New York Times.

In June the Northeastern Saengerbund of America will hold a saengerfest at Baltimore, and the United Singers of that city sent a delegation to Washington to invite the president to be their guest on that occasion. An appointment had been made for the delegation to meet the president at 10:30 in the morning. The singers failed to put in an appearance on time, but there arrived at the president's office another delegation from Baltimore, at the head of which was Senator McComas as friend and guide.

The doorkeeper ushered the McComas delegation into the anteroom to the president's office. In a few minutes the president bounded into the room and greeted Senator McComas with his usual exuberance. Before the senator could make any announcement the president said:

"I am delighted to see you. My Irish-Dutch genealogy does not prevent me from desiring to hear your German songs and attend your fest, but really—"

Realizing that Mr. Roosevelt had been led in some manner into a mistake, Senator McComas quickly explained that the delegation did not come to invite the president to listen to songs, but to attend the annual dinner of the Hibernian society of Baltimore, which would be given in that city on the night of St. Patrick's day, March 17. The delegation was highly amused with the president's mistake, and the good humor he exhibited over it furnished a sufficient excuse for the laughter that followed.

A Sportsman's Show Feature.

The leading entertainment feature of the sportsman's show in New York this year will be the cantata of Hiawatha, or, as it has been called by its composer, Frederick R. Burton, "Songs of the Woods," says the New York Times. About 150 persons will take part in its production, including the chorus of sixty voices, some thirty or more Ojibway Indians from the reservation on the Canadian shore of Lake Huron and the Symphony Concert orchestra of forty-five pieces. Costumes have been especially prepared for the occasion.

Railway For Black Sea Trade.

The latest important work done by the Russian government in order to foster Black sea trade is the construction in the neighborhood of Samsat and Tauriza of a railway line and an enormous basin and port which is to serve as an outlet for the grain, petroleum, fish and other cargoes of the Volga and Tauriza basins. It is expected that about 5,000,000 tons of commodities will yearly pass through this port to Novorossisk.

An Easter Notice.

Pretty things for Easter are out already, says the New York Times. Chicken houses, which are elaborate in design for the barnyard inhabitants, are made for chicken houses and are large enough to hold a round or more of candy. There is a yard around each small house, and if there are not one or two downy chickens in the yard they are sure to be perched upon the roof. The boxes are filled with fine chocolates.

SEWALL'S IMPRESSIONS

NONE SO GREAT AS "THEODORE."

Maine Guide Says He Was Treated Like a Prince—Washington—'Pretty Gorgeous,' but Oldtown, Me., and Other Large Cities Have Style. Sightseeing in New York.

Bill Sewall has gone to his home in Highland Falls, Me., quite convinced that, even if Theodore, as he fondly calls President Roosevelt, is a bigger man than all the princes on earth, New York is "some punkins" as a town. Bill flatter himself on record as to the former opinion while he was touring the latter idea under the guidance of a New York Herald reporter, who undertook to guide him and his party the other day through the labyrinth of skyscrapers and subways upon their return from Washington, where they had been having the "time of their lives" as guests of the president.

Sewall is a powerful name down Maine way, but with the prestige added to it Bill's share of the great family patronymic will become part of history in the big state of moose and wildernesses. Bill has guided Theodore Roosevelt through Maine woods, as he tells it, since the president made his first visit as a stripling of eighteen.

Bill thought he wouldn't have time to see much of New York, for he wanted to take one of the Boston boats for a good sail and a chance to sleep a little after the round of gayety at Washington, where he and his party didn't get a chance to go to bed until a quarter after 7 any night.

But there wasn't a Fall River boat, it being Sunday, and the reporter suggested a 5 o'clock train from the Grand Central station. Bill clutched his grip. Bill's party clutched their numerous hand baggage and chorused with Bill, "Where is it?" Crossing the ferry, an eager line of Maine folk it was that lined up at the front windows and peered through the gray dampness, watching with awe the looming sky line of lower New York. The big buildings were pointed out and described.

"Ground must be mighty dear," observed Bill sagely. "I s'pose it comes at dollars to the foot about here. Kinder wish I didn't have to get back so soon. Like to stay awhile, but got to get back home to Highland Falls. All tucked out from our visit, ye see."

The gaping subway ditches called forth much wonder, which did not diminish when it was explained that they were to be covered up and trains were to run in them at fifty miles an hour.

"Not for me," remarked Bill sententiously. "I'm in no hurry to get under ground till my time comes."

The "Platonic building put a kink in seven Maine necks as it was passed, and a young member of the party "ducked," as though he did not like the way it hung up in the air.

"Washington monument's pretty tall," remarked Mr. Sewall, "but that thing beats it a bit, I guess. Don't it rock when it blows hard? Must have gone down a mile to dig a hole to plant that in."

While waiting for his train Bill Sewall chatted of his week at Washington as the president's guest.

"It's pretty gorgeous down there," he declared, "and the congressional reception was a mighty fine affair, but the style I was told was going to dazzle us all didn't seem to us to amount to much. Why, we've got some style of our own down to home. There's Oldtown and some of the other big cities—they're just as stylish as Washington and a lot more sincere about it."

"How did the White House impress you?"

"Well, just as I told Theodore, it's about the most elaborate and elegant camp on earth. We take good care of our presidents, and we'd ought to, for we get good presidents, and the job is worth the best we can give 'em. And," with great earnestness, "we never got a better one than Theodore Roosevelt. But he's just the same man down there as he is while I am guiding him down in Maine. You can't change that kind of man. He'll be himself wherever he is. White House living won't hurt his kind, and he's at it just as hard whether he's trailing moose or foreign allies, and he'll bring 'em down either way."

"Theodore treated us all like he would a prince. When he told me last summer that I'd have to run down and visit him, I was a bit doubtful whether we'd get to go. It was so far, and the things he has to bother him might make us feel we were taking up his time. But, bless you, he just made us feel to home, and we've seen everything in Washington from the capitol and the big library to the grave at Mount Vernon where our first president was buried."

"But," wisely, "I do wish we had some time left over to see more of New York, its big buildings that hit the sky, its big bridges and its queer ways of carrying people up in the air and under the streets."

Plan to Recognize a Hero.

England is to recognize another of her dead heroes who have been forgotten by many. John Nicholson, says the Philadelphia Record. Money is being raised to put up a bronze statue of him in the Nicholson garden at Delhi, where already there is a more impressive monument to his memory. In the garden is a simple stone, for through that gate John Nicholson carried the English flag when Delhi was stormed during the mutiny, and during the charge he received his mortal wound.

A HOLDUP

(Original.)
It was in the olden time when a traveler between Denver and Laramie must go in an old fashioned stagecoach. There was one season when the coach was robbed as often as once a week. Passengers knew that there was one chance in seven of being held up on the road and traveled with little or no money on their persons. Nevertheless there was no other way of transporting valuables, and sometimes persons were obliged to take great risks.

It was necessary for me to go through to Laramie on important business. I found in the coach a young lady and two miners. This generation cannot realize the high position of women in that uncouth country at that period. As rare and beautiful birds are protected by game laws, so were the few women always safe in the chivalrous sentiment of the many men.

Of course we all soon got acquainted, the miners, who were of rough exterior, leaving the young lady to me. The chief topic of discussion was what we would do in case of a holdup. One miner said that he had a hundred dollars in dust in his hip pocket with a revolver and would draw the revolver first. The other miner had $50 hidden under his shirt and if required to surrender it at the point of a pistol he would certainly do so. The young lady, who was going east to spend the winter, had her ticket and some small bills in her pocketbook, the rest, four $100 bills, concealed in her hair. I confessed with equal frankness that all I had brought with me was in my vest pocket and if it was taken I couldn't help it.

Sure enough, the holdup came. The first we knew of it the coach came to a stop and the door was flung open from the outside. Half a dozen masked men stood in the road with rifles cocked and ready for use while another held their horses. The man who opened the door ordered the passengers out and to stand in line to be searched. I was first examined and relieved of some $50 in my vest pocket. The miners came next. The man with the revolver in his hip pocket had no opportunity to use it, for we all stood hands up. He and his friend were both plundered. The robbers were rather pleased to find more than usual and after politely wishing us a pleasant journey were about to permit us to go on when one of them, looking at me sharply, said:

"Young man, weren't you taller in the bank when a lot of us went through it one day two years ago?"

"I was."

"Well, I reckon you must be in the same business now."

"I'm buying horses for the government."

"What—buying horses with this chicken feed?" referring to the cash they had taken.

"See here," I said. "You men are not so sharp as you think. I wouldn't be delayed on this trip for a gold mine. If I tell you where you can find $400, will you let us go on?"

At first they said that if I didn't give them the information I should never go on and began to search the coach. Not finding anything and fearing an interruption, they assented to my terms.

"You will find it in that young lady's hair," I said.

They at once took off the girl's hat, removed the hairpins and found the bills, which they held aloft with glee.

It is many years since I saw the glance of contempt given me by the young lady, but it is as plain in my memory today as it was then. It was something to wound my amour propre, but the fierce glances turned upon me by the miners indicated that when left alone with me they would end my career without benefit either of clergy or jury.

The robbers, delighted with the addition to their find acquired through my instrumentality, jumped on their horses and rode away in a hurry. The two miners watched them till they turned into a wood. Then the man with the revolver slowly drew it from his hip pocket and, pointing it at me, said:

"Say yer prayers!"

"One moment. 'I'—"

"Not a second! I'll teach you, you low down dog, that no man in Colorado can play such a game as that on a woman."

"But—"

"Say your prayers!" thundered the man, nervously endeavoring to keep his finger off the trigger of his pistol. It began to look as if I should be sent out of the world without an opportunity to speak a word in my defense, but the young lady interfered.

"Leave him to me," she said, brushing the pistol aside with her hand. "He injured me, not you."

The man stood irresolute.

"Give me a chance to explain," I pleaded.

"Why did you do it?" asked the girl.

"I am the cashier of the 4th National bank of Denver. I have fifty $1000 bills sewed up in my clothing. If I hadn't diverted the attention of the robbers, they would have got it all. Your $400 will be returned with a splendid interest. You men will each receive a handsome present, and whenever you want grub staking while working a claim you will get it from our bank. Now let us get on as fast as possible and save the treasure. Something might induce the agents to return."

They consented with alacrity. After the girl reached her home she received a certificate of stock of the bank worth $3,000. The men later on were grub staked in working a claim which they sold for a good profit.

LOOK OUT FOR CATARRH

The cold-wave flag means zero weather, icy, moisture-laden winds, and the beginning of winter in earnest. To Catarrh sufferers there is nothing cheering in these climatic changes, for with the return of cold weather, all the disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh appear: blinding headaches, dizziness, a stuffy feeling about the nose that makes breathing difficult, chest pains, and as the disease progresses, a discharge of nauseating matter from the throat and nose keeps one continually hawking and spitting.

Catarrh is a most disgusting disease. The foul mucous secretions that are constantly dropping back into the stomach contaminate and poison the blood, and it is distributed throughout the body, and it then becomes a deep-seated, systemic, persistent disease that must be treated through the blood, for it is beyond the reach of sprays, washes, powders or external treatment of any kind.

S. S. S. soon clears the system of all Catarrhal matter and purges the blood of the irritating poisons, thus effectually checking the further progress of this serious and far reaching disease.

Look out for Catarrh in winter, for cold stirs the blood and causes excessive secretion of mucus and brings to life all the slumbering poisons that make Catarrh the most abominable of all diseases. S. S. S. keeps the blood in such perfect order that cold waves cause no alarm and the change from the heat of summer to the rigors of winter produce no harmful effects.

Write us if you have Catarrh, and our Physicians will advise you without charge. Book on Blood and Skin Diseases free.

FUNERAL

OF JAMES W. COLLINS TOOK PLACE SUNDAY.

The funeral of the late James W. Collins took place from his late home, 63 North Second street, Sunday at 2 o'clock. The funeral was under the auspices of Newark Lodge, No. 97, F. & A. M., of which the deceased had for long time been a prominent member, as well as of the Chapter and Council. The Second Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Collins was a member, being without a pastor, the Rev. L. S. Boyce of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. A large concourse of relatives and friends assembled. The pall bearers were Messrs. W. H. Davis, James K. Hamill, Emmet Baugher, Judge S. M. Hunter, W. A. Veach and J. A. Chilcote.

After the prayer of Rev. Mr. Boyce Judge Hunter arose and said:

My friends, I beg permission to say a few things in addition to what was said by the holy man who has preceded me. I cannot sit here silent, while the last sad rites are performed over all that is left of our dear friend. No man outside of his own family knew this man as I knew him. I was his best friend, and he was mine. For thirty years in this old town of Newark, that friendship has been abiding, resisting every assault, passing through every test, attended with growing respect, it still grew stronger and stronger, until there was no living man I loved better than I loved that man who is lying there. And I cannot see him take his last long journey without laying my immortality upon his coffin.

I knew his inner life. I knew his outer life! and they were alike. Dr. Collins was a strong man morally, mentally, and until late years, physically. Strong as he was he never jarred, but was like a fine piece of machinery, his strength was never attended with noise or disturbance.

Dr. Collins came to this city from Belmont county, Ohio, in 1863. Having been one of the foremost and most respected citizens in that county, when he came here he also became one of the foremost and most respected citizens in this city and county. During most of that time I have been his legal adviser, as well as his friend, nor has anything ever happened to shake my firm faith in him. He was a man of matchless courage, moral and physical. He never showed his back to an enemy, nor flinched from the side of a friend, nor faltered a hair's breadth from his principles. I have served with him for years in the City Council and Board of Trade in this city, and in all that time never knew him to utter a false, dishonest or treacherous note. It is a splendid commentary on his character, that of all the members of my profession in the county, each one was his friend.

Born and raised in the Presbyterian church he was a member of that church until he died, and all the time he openly preached and practiced the tenets of the Christian religion and never for a moment from shame, unbelief, pride of intellect, moral cowardice or for any other reason, did he shrink or fall away from the full strength of the religious teachings he received, sixty years ago, at his mother's knee.

His family was a model one; and no family of boys ever had a better father, and no woman ever had a better, a nobler, a more chivalrous husband, than the mother of those same boys. Blessed with a wife who was a priceless jewel among wives, mothers and Christian women, the abiding love and sweet consideration which existed between them was beyond compare, and grew stronger and more beautiful as they went through life, hand in hand, together. And when God, in his Divine Providence took her from him, and while he held her hand as the cold waters of Jordan came up to her feet, we all thought, though we spoke not, that he would not stay long without her.

So, my friends, as we turn sorrowing away from this sad scene, I say to you, that there, lying in that coffin, is the noblest work of God, an Honest Man.

INSPIRING

The Washington Birthday services in Taylor Hall Sunday was, everything considered, one of the best, most inspiring Men's Meeting that the Y. M. C. A. has held this year.

The opening musical service was exceptionally strong. Several dozen singers seated on the platform under the leadership of Prof. Yeardley, rendered the old-time sacred and patriotic hymns with a fervor that was really inspiring. Dr. Monroe sang two tenor solos in his splendid style. Especially pleasing was his rendition of "The Sinner and a Song," in which a number of sacred melodies were effectively entwined.

The address by Prof. R. S. Colwell of Denison University on "True Patriotism" was a most eloquent appeal for everyday Christian citizenship. Three things he emphasized. That a real and grave responsibility rests upon every man to take an active part in deciding who shall occupy the positions of trust both in our national and local government.

Second, that it is not an easy thing to purify politics—it is so difficult that it requires the united effort of every upright man in the community.

Third, it can be done if all will awake to their responsibility and make their wishes felt. Corruption will always flee from a united effort for civic righteousness.

It was announced at the close of the meeting that Prof. Williams is expected to give the last of his series of lectures next Sunday afternoon.

JNO. W. MOCK

The Defiance Democrat contains the following regarding the death of John W. Mock, a former resident of Licking county:

"John W. Mock died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Albert Bates, in North Defiance, February 7, 1903, of pneumonia, aged 65 years, 4 months and 13 days. The deceased was born in Licking county. In 1859 he was united in marriage to Sara A. Blue of Delephi, Ind. After a few years they moved to Defiance where they have resided for the past thirty years. A wife preceded him a year ago to the spirit world leaving him sad and lonely.

Mr. Mock was a good citizen, a kind hearted neighbor beloved by all who knew him. He was also a soldier of the war of the rebellion, a member of Company A, 18th regiment. The glorious old stars and stripes he faithfully served. Patiently he bore the trials and hardships of a soldier's life until the close of the war. Tuesday afternoon, amid beautiful flowers, and a large concourse of friends attended by the G. A. R. of which he was a member, he was laid to rest in the Riverside cemetery where his body will peacefully sleep until eternity's bugle will recall him forth in answer to his name. While his spirit has passed to the great unknown, from whence no traveler returns, there to again meet his beloved companion and comrades that have gone before him leaving only another mound of earth, another soldier's grave for us to cover with flowers, another soldier's memory to cherish and honor.

THE W. C. T. U.

At the meeting held on Monday, February 17th, the devotional hour was in charge of Mrs. Upham, who read the Scripture lesson from the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs and the fifteenth chapter of Corinthians.

The 17th of February being the fifth anniversary of the death of Frances Willard, a commemorative service was held. Choice selections were sung, among which were, "Sleep softly, dear heart," "In the upper garden," etc., by Mrs. Wright and Miss Gault, with Mrs. Bovey presiding at the organ.

Selections were read of Miss Willard as a teacher, organizer and a leader. She was educated in Illinois at the Northwestern University at Evanston. She achieved the position of dean of the woman's department of the university and professor of rhetoric in a faculty otherwise composed of men, nearly all of whom had been graduated from European universities. She herself studied abroad two years or more in French, German, Italian history and the fine arts being the subject to which her attention was devoted. It was her expectation to be a literary woman in connection with her work as a college professor. She was perhaps more celebrated for her method of school government than for any other one thing at this time. In 1862 she wrote her first book, "Nineteen Beautiful Years," which was introduced by the poet Whitier and afterwards translated in several languages.

She was the author of eleven books or more. In 1874 she severed her relations with the university, giving up a salary of $2,500 a year to accept the presidency of a local W. C. T. U., fully believing that she was called to this work by the blessed Master. "Thy gentleness has made thee great," says the Psalmist. It made Frances Willard great, too, and we may gain an insight into the beauty of her character and the greatness of her soul from the fact of this crisis of her life.

Our beloved was a great leader because within her little hand she held the hearts of all who followed and with irresistible charm she drew those who lacked the courage to follow. All loved her because she loved all; all trusted her because she had faith in humanity and humanity had faith in Frances Willard.

At the close of the service a collection was taken which will be sent to the memorial fund to carry on the work so effectually planned by our leader.

On next Tuesday the devotional will be led by Mrs. Phillips. A responsive reading will be led by Mrs. Harrington. All are welcome.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. William Owen who has made so favorable an impression by his performance of various Shakespearean roles, has made a wide departure in the style of his performance by selecting Sheridan's famous comedy, "The School for Scandal," for his this season's production. The comedy has not been seen here in years and has never been given a thorough production in this country outside of New York. It is beyond question the greatest comedy ever written, and but for the expense connected with its revival would be seen more frequently. Mr. Owen has not been sparing in making his production and a most complete performance may be looked for, excelling any of his former efforts. Monday, March 2, is the date arranged for his appearance here at the Auditorium.

The blood becomes thick, circulation slow; eliminating organs inactive; the system retains for longer time excretory matter, and disease naturally ensues. It may develop in indigestion, fevers, mal-assimilation, rheumatism, general debility, nervousness, coughs, colds, bronchitis. For these conditions Hagee's Cordial of Cod Liver Oil is unequalled. It's a revitalizer, purifier and reconstructor—contains all the active principles of cod liver oil, without the nauseating grease, fishy odor, or unpleasant taste. Pleasant to take. A fine tonic food for puny children.

SONG RECITAL

Given at Taylor Hall Saturday Night Was a Delight to All Lovers of Music—The Program.

The song recital is the most refined expression of modern musical art. Only a singer of unusual ability, culture and versatility can hope to interest the average audience in this peculiar field of entertainment. That Dr. Herman Monroe is a young artist who possesses these qualifications was demonstrated at the Y. M. C. A. hall recital Saturday evening, where a large and cultured audience was entertained during an hour and a half of charming song, rendered with a breadth of interpretive power as rare as it is delightful.

Dr. Monroe's program was not at all classic, but the lightest number was choice. A varied selection of strongly contrasted songs enabled the singer to display a tenor voice of more than ordinary sweetness and volume, and a method of tone-production almost flawless. In his interpretation of these songs, Dr. Monroe swept the entire gamut of human emotion, from the exalted sentiment of Allittsen's "Song of Thanksgiving," delivered in ringing fortissimo, to the plaintive pathos of Metcal's "Absent" whose exquisite pianissimo died away into silence. Nevins' "Rosary" was given with an intensity that won an encore, though the length of the program prevented a response.

Dr. Monroe was assisted by the High school Glee Club in two numbers directed by Prof. N. B. Yeardley, and Miss Elsie Hirschberg, a member of the club, who sang with the Doctor the ever-popular duet, "Oh, That We Two Were Maying," which elicited such hearty applause that it had to be repeated. Miss Hirschberg has a well cultivated mezzo-soprano voice, and sings with taste and expression.

Throughout the recital Miss Adalikes played Dr. Monroe's accompaniments in a musicianly and sympathetic style, which contributed much to the beauty of the vocal numbers.

The fresh young voices of the Glee Club were heard to advantage in the vocal quartet, "Among the Lilies," by Czibulka, and in the humming chorus to "Swanee Ribber," with Dr. Monroe. They are rehearsing under the skillful baton of Prof. Yeardley for a concert in the near future.

Special Meetings.

The special meetings at the Fourth street Church of Christ will continue over Wednesday night. There is a splendid interest. Last night Mr. Allisen preached an able sermon on "Divine Authority." The house was filled to the doors, a number standing throughout the entire service and many were turned away. There were in addition at Sunday's services Mr. Allisen will preach tonight at 7:30. You are invited. Come early.

To Catarrh sufferers there is nothing cheering in these climatic changes, for with the return of cold weather, all the disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh appear: blinding headaches, dizziness, a stuffy feeling about the nose that makes breathing difficult, chest pains, and as the disease progresses, a discharge of nauseating matter from the throat and nose keeps one continually hawking and spitting. Catarrh is a most disgusting disease. The foul mucous secretions that are constantly dropping back into the stomach contaminate and poison the blood and it is distributed throughout the body, and it then becomes a deep-seated, systemic, persistent disease that must be treated through the blood, for it is beyond the reach of sprays, washes, powders or external treatment of any kind. S. S. S. soon clears the system of all Catarrhal matter and purges the blood of the irritating poisons, thus effectually checking the further progress of this serious and far reaching disease. Look out for Catarrh in winter, for cold stirs the blood and causes excessive secretion of mucus and brings to life all the slumbering poisons that make Catarrh the most abominable of all diseases. S. S. S. keeps the blood in such perfect order that cold waves cause no alarm and the change from the heat of summer to the rigors of winter produce no harmful effects. Write us if you have Catarrh, and our Physicians will advise you without charge. Look on Blood and Skin Diseases free. The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

A big effort will be made to re-elect Mrs. Senator Fairbanks as president general, although the constitution says no person shall hold office more than two terms successively.

FUNERAL

OF JAMES W. COLLINS TOOK PLACE SUNDAY.

The funeral of the late James W. Collins took place from his late home, 63 North Second street, Sunday at 2 o'clock. The funeral was under the auspices of Newark Lodge, No. 97, F. & A. M., of which the deceased had for long time been a prominent member, as well as of the Chapter and Council. The Second Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Collins was a member, being without a pastor, the Rev. L. S. Boyce of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. A large concourse of relatives and friends assembled. The pall bearers were Messrs. W. H. Davis, James K. Hamill, Emmet Baugher, Judge S. M. Hunter, W. A. Veach and J. A. Chilcote.

After the prayer of Rev. Mr. Boyce Judge Hunter arose and said: My friends, I beg permission to say a few things in addition to what was said by the holy man who has preceded me. I cannot sit here silent, while the last sad rites are performed over all that is left of our dear friend. No man outside of his own family knew this man as I knew him. I was his best friend, and he was mine. For thirty years in this old town of Newark, that friendship has been abiding, resisting every assault, passing through every test, attended with growing respect, it still grew stronger and stronger, until there was no living man I loved better than I loved that man who is lying there. And I cannot see him take his last long journey without laying my immortelle upon his coffin.

I knew his inner life. I knew his outer life! and they were alike. Dr. Collins was a strong man morally, mentally, and until late years, physically. Strong as he was he never jarred, but was like a fine piece of machinery, his strength was never attended with noise or disturbance. Dr. Collins came to this city from Belmont county, Ohio, in 1863. Having been one of the foremost and most respected citizens in that county, when he came here he also became one of the foremost and most respected citizens in this city and county. During most of that time I have been his legal adviser, as well as his friend, nor has anything ever happened to shake my firm faith in him. He was a man of matchless courage, moral and physical. He never showed his back to an enemy, nor flinched from the side of a friend, nor faltered a hair's breadth from his principles. I have served with him for years in the City Council and Board of Trade in this city, and in all that time never knew him to utter a false, dishonest or treacherous note. It is a splendid commentary on his character, that of all the members of my profession in the county, each one was his friend.

Born and raised in the Presbyterian church he was a member of that church until he died, and all the time he openly preached and practiced the tenets of the Christian religion and never for a moment from shame, unbelief, pride of intellect, moral cowardice or for any other reason, did he shrink or fall away from the full strength of the religious teachings he received, sixty years ago, at his mother's knee.

His family was a model one; and no family of boys ever had a better father, and no woman ever had a better, a nobler, a more chivalrous husband, than the mother of those same boys. Blessed with a wife who was a price less jewel among wives, mothers and Christian women, the abiding love and sweet consideration which existed between them was beyond compare, and grew stronger and more beautiful as they went through life, hand in hand, together. And when God, in his Divine Providence took her from him, and while he held her hand as the cold waters of Jordan came up to her feet, we all thought, though we spoke not, that he would not stay long without her.

So, my friends, as we turn sorrowing away from this sad scene, I say to you, that there, lying in that coffin, is the noblest work of God, an Honest Man.

INSPIRING

The Washington Birthday services in Taylor Hall Sunday was, everything considered, one of the best, most inspiring Men's Meeting that the Y. M. C. A. was held this year.

The opening musical service was exceptionally strong. Several dozen singers seated on the platform under the leadership of Prof. Yeardley, rendered the old-time sacred and patriotic hymns with a fervor that was really inspiring. Dr. Monroe sang two tenor solos in his splendid style. Especially pleasing was his rendition of "The Sinner and a Song", in which a number of sacred melodies were effectively entwined.

The address by Prof. R. S. Colwell of Denison University on "True Patriotism" was a most eloquent appeal for everyday Christian citizenship. Three things he emphasized. That a real and grave responsibility rests upon every man to take an active part in deciding who shall occupy the positions of trust both in our national and local government.

Second, that it is not an easy thing to purify politics—it is so difficult that it requires the united effort of every upright man in the community.

Third It can be done if all will awake to their responsibility and make their wishes felt. Corruption will always flee from a united effort for civic righteousness.

It was announced at the close of the meeting that Prof. Williams is expected to give the last of his series of lectures next Sunday afternoon.

JNO. W. MOCK

The Defiance Democrat contains the following regarding the death of John W. Mock, a former resident of Licking county:

"John W. Mock died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Albert Bates, in North Defiance, February 7, 1903, of pneumonia, aged 65 years, 4 months and 13 days. The deceased was born in Licking county. In 1859 he was united in marriage to Sara A. Blue of Delphi, Ind. After a few years they moved to Defiance where they have resided for the past thirty years. A wife preceded him a year ago to the spirit world leaving him sad and lonely.

Mr. Mock was a good citizen, a kind hearted neighbor beloved by all who knew him. He was also a soldier of the war of the rebellion, a member of Company A, 18th regiment. The glorious old stars and stripes he faithfully served. Patiently he bore the trials and hardships of a soldier's life until the close of the war. Tuesday afternoon, amid beautiful flowers, and a large concourse of friends attended by the G. A. R. of which he was a member, he was laid to rest in the Riverside cemetery where his body will peacefully sleep until eternity's breeze will recall him forth to answer to his name. While his spirit has passed to the great unknown, from whence no traveler returns, there to again meet his beloved companion and comrades that have gone before him leaving only another mound of earth, another soldier's grave for us to cover with flowers, another soldier's memory to cherish and honor.

THE W. C. T. U.

At the meeting held on Monday, February 17th, the devotional hour was in charge of Mrs. Upham, who read the Scripture lesson from the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs and the fifteenth chapter of Corinthians.

The 17th of February being the fifth anniversary of the death of Frances Willard, a commemorative service was held. Choice selections were sung, among which were, "Sleep softly, dear heart," "In the upper garden," etc., by Mrs. Wright and Miss Gault, with Mrs. Bovey presiding at the organ.

Selections were read of Miss Willard as a teacher, organizer and a leader. She was educated in Illinois at the Northwestern University at Evanston. She achieved the position of dean of the woman's department of the university and professor of rhetoric in a faculty otherwise composed of men, nearly all of whom had been graduated from European universities. She herself studied abroad two years or more in French, German, Italian history and the fine arts being the subject to which her attention was devoted. It was her expectation to be a literary woman in connection with her work as a college professor. She was perhaps more celebrated for her method of school government than for any other one thing at this time. In 1862 she wrote her first book, "Nineteen Beautiful Years," which was introduced by the poet Whittier and afterwards translated in several languages.

She was the author of eleven books or more. In 1874 she severed her relations with the university, giving up a salary of $2,500 a year to accept the presidency of a local W. C. T. U., fully believing that she was called to this work by the blessed Master. "Thy gentleness has made thee great," says the Psalmist. It made Frances Willard great, too, and we may gain an insight into the beauty of her character and the greatness of her soul from the fact of this crisis of her life.

Our beloved was a great leader because within her little hand she held the hearts of all who followed and with irresistible charm she drew those who lacked the courage to follow. All loved her because she loved all; all trusted her because she had faith in humanity and humanity had faith in Frances Willard.

At the close of the service a collection was taken which will be sent to the memorial fund to carry on the work so effectually planned by our leader.

On next Tuesday the devotional will be led by Mrs. Phillips. A responsive reading will be led by Mrs. Harrington. All are welcome.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. William Owen who has made so favorable an impression by his performance of various Shakespearean roles, has made a wide departure in the style of his performance by selecting Sheridan's famous comedy, "The School for Scandal," for his this season's production. The comedy has not been seen here in years and has never been given a thorough production in this country outside of New York. It is beyond question the greatest comedy ever written, and but for the expense connected with its revival would be seen more frequently. Mr. Owen has not been sparing in making his production and a most complete performance may be looked for, exceeding any of his former efforts. Monday, March 2, is the date arranged for his appearance here at the Auditorium.

The blood becomes thick, circulation slow; eliminating organs inactive; the system retains for longer time excretive matter, and disease naturally ensues. It may develop in indigestion, fevers, mal-assimilation, rheumatism, general debility, nervousness, coughs, colds, bronchitis. For these conditions Hagee's Cordial of Cod Liver Oil is unequalled. It's a revitalizer, purifier and reconstructor—contains all the active principles of cod liver oil, without the nauseating grease, fishy odor, or unpleasant taste. Pleasant to take. # SONG RECITAL

The song recital is the most refined expression of modern musical art. Only a singer of unusual ability, culture and versatility can hope to interest the average audience in this peculiar field of entertainment. That Dr. Herman Monroe is a young artist who possesses these qualifications was demonstrated at the Y. M. C. A. hall recital Saturday evening, where a large and cultured audience was entertained during an hour and a half of charming song, rendered with a breadth of interpretive power as rare as it is delightful.

Dr. Monroe's program was not at all classic, but the lightest number was choice. A varied selection of strongly contrasted songs enabled the singer to display a tenor voice of more than ordinary sweetness and volume, and a method of tone-production almost flawless. In his interpretation of these songs, Dr. Monroe swept the entire gamut of human emotion, from the exalted sentiment of Allittsen's "Song of Thanksgiving," delivered in ringing fortissimo, to the plaintive pathos of Metcalf's "Absent" whose exquisite pianissimos died away into silence. Nevins' "Rosary" was given with an intensity that won an encore, though the length of the program prevented a response.

CLASS RUSH

Delaware, O., Feb. 23.—The sophomore and freshman classes of Ohio Wesleyan engaged in a class rush. Celebrating Washington's birthday the Sophs marched to Monnett Hall, each arrayed in a night dress to serenade the girls. While thus engaged the freshmen swooped down upon them, and a bitter class fight resulted. It would be difficult to tell which class came out victorious and many members of each are wearing bandages on their heads.

During a clash between the two classes later in the day E. A. Enoch, a sophomore of Springfield, Ohio, was thrown and rendered unconscious. It is feared his skull has been fractured.

The A. M. E. Church Debt.

Mr. Jacob Merchant, who with the co-operation of others, has devoted much time and effort to raise funds to meet the mortgage on the A. M. ## DEATH

OF MISS MARY WEBB ON SUNDAY MORNING.

Peacefully Passed to Rest After Seven Long Weeks Siege With Typhoid Fever—The Funeral.

After a gallant struggle of seven weeks, that elicited the admiration and sympathy of the entire community, against the last of human foes, Miss Mary Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Webb, gave up the unequal contest and peacefully passed to eternal rest at 2:40 o'clock Sunday morning, the ravages of dread typhoid having undermined her magnificent physical constitution, and sapped her splendid vitality.

Since she was taken ill between Christmas and New Year, it may be truly said that the entire city followed with intense interest, the progress of her sickness. Robust, and in the bloom of perfect health, she was stricken cruelly and almost immediately it became a struggle to the death between her young and buoyant spirit, and the destructive genius of wasting disease in the bodily organism. On her side was allied all that human skill could suggest, and loving ministrations could make effective. The result for days, hung tremblingly in the balance. Ever and anon hope of victory took possession of the hearts of anxious watchers, and kindly sympathetic friends. It seemed assured that the young life would be spared to attain its full fruition in noble, useful womanhood. Again an outlook for complication with its attendant symptoms of alarm, would be noticed and the new born hope would be crushed to earth, only to rise again, seemingly triumphant as a vital power, apparently in inexhaustible reserve, would respond to the extraordinary call upon it.

The drain upon this resourceful vitality however, because so great and frequent that it became spent, and human nature could stand no more.

Then, and not till then, like a tired child Mary Webb sank into the dreamless sleep, that has a glorious awakening, and the generous, affectionate, yet indomitable spirit, fled to Him who gave it.

Mary Cornelia Webb was the daughter of George P. Webb, and was born in Newark in February, 1884, being 19 years and 15 days old at the time of her death.

She leaves besides her father and mother, three brothers, Albert R. Webb of Paducah, Ky., Charles Webb, a prominent young farmer of Union township, and Frank C. Webb of this city.

The deceased was a member of Trinity Episcopal church and a teacher in its Sabbath school. She was also a member of the senior class in the Newark High school, where her strong intellectual abilities won for her a high standing in scholarship. She was a bright and cheerful young woman, her every impulse being one of unselfish generosity, which in her social life made her a general favorite with everyone with whom she conversed or was associated.

Her life had just opened on the threshold of womanhood, showing a vista of years, bright in prospect, and teeming with every possibility of success and happiness.

A Providence, inscrutable, inexorable and incapable of being understood at this time, by those who are pitifully desolate, had willed otherwise, however, and the young spirit was taken to other realms there to evolve that full, untrammelled, unending existence only begun on earth.

To the father, mother and brothers, words at this time are powerless to assuage the poignant grief, or lighten the burden of this crushing sorrow. Friends drop a tear of sincere sympathy on the bier of the true young woman, but this cannot reach the heart of those dear ones, that is torn and bleeding from the cruel wound.

They are commended to God alone, who has promised that He will give them grace sufficient to bear even this seemingly insupportable sorrow. To Him they must go with trusting faith, that there is to be found succor from this weight of woe.

The funeral will take place from Trinity church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. G. W. Van Fossen reading the service.

The remains will for the present be placed in the vault at Cedar Hill cemetery.

REBUS CONTEST

Picturing Prominent Newark Business Firms

Cash Prizes Will be Awarded the Boys and Girls

Who Solve the Rebuses and Write Not More Than 100 Word Description of Any One of the Firms

Daily Beginning Feb. 24.

Beginning tomorrow evening, February 24th the Advocate will publish a series of rebuses representing well known Newark firms. One rebus will appear in each issue of the paper until the series is completed and prizes will be offered for their successful solution.

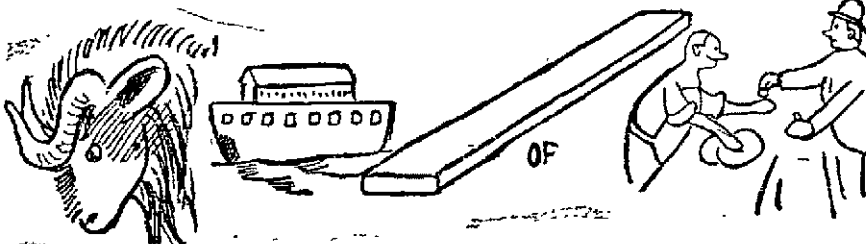

This feature is intended expressly for the young people of Newark and for that reason the contestants will be limited to boys and girls 15 years of age or younger.

The Advocate artist has drawn a number of pictures which represent prominent Newark firms and the contest will consist not only in naming the firms represented by the pictures, but in writing a short description of the place of business which any single one of the rebuses portrays.

It will cost nothing to participate in the contest and every Advocate reader will have an equal chance with every other reader provided he or she is not more than 15 years of age.

Cash prizes will be awarded by three competent judges who will be named by the publishers of this paper later.

Gnu - Ark Board of Trade

This drawing represents the Newark Board of Trade, an institution to which the city of Newark owes much. The drawing shows a gnu, an ark, a board, the word "of" and picture of two men engaged in the act of making a trade. Thus in the pictures which are to follow from day to day, beginning Tuesday, the names of business firms of Newark will be shown.

Those who compete in the contest are required to fill in a blank with the solution and name of the contestant and to send it by mail or otherwise to the Rebus Editor of the Advocate.

Solutions are not to be sent in separately but ten at a time. In other words coupons are to be clipped from the Advocate each day for ten days and mailed or sent to this office together with a 100 word description of the store or place of business of any single one of the firms illustrated during that period of ten days. Only one written description of not more than 100 words is required and upon the merits of that description and the correct solution of the rebuses the award of prizes will be made.

The description may be less than 100 words, but must not exceed 100 words.

To the boy or girl fifteen years of age or under who sends in the first ten rebuses correctly solved with best 100 word description of any one of the firms illustrated in the ten rebuses, the Advocate will give a prize of $5 in cash.

To the one whose solutions are correct and whose written 100 word description is second best, a prize of $3 will be given.

To the one whose solutions are correct and whose 100 word description is third best, in the opinion of the three judges, a prize of $2 will be given.

Remember only one written description is required and the contestant may choose any one of the ten firms represented in the pictures as the subject for the 100 word description. Spelling, writing, punctuation, composition and neatness will be considered by the judges in reaching their conclusions as to the merits of the compositions.

First, the puzzles must be correctly solved.

Second, the names of the contestants must appear on each blank clipped from the Advocate.

Third, no one over 15 years of age is allowed to compete.

Fourth, a 100 word (no longer) description of any single one of the firms' place of business must accompany the ten coupons.

Fifth, the rebuses properly filled out together with the 100 word description must be mailed or sent to the Advocate office not later than Saturday, March 14th at 7 p. m.

As soon thereafter as the judges can reach a decision the prizes will be awarded and checks mailed to the winners.

This contest is open to all readers of the Advocate not more than 15 years of age. The solution of the rebuses will afford the boys and girls pleasure and will be good mental exercise, while the writing of the 100 word article will train them in composition, description, orthography, grammar and in conciseness of statement. No article containing more than 100 words will be considered.

Here is an opportunity for the bright boys and girls of Newark to earn a little "pin money" and have a little fun thrown in. Watch for the pictures beginning Tuesday. Clip them out and fill in the blanks after you have decided what firm the picture represents. At any time before March 14 write 100 words about any one of the firms represented and send in your coupons with your 100 word article.

CIRCLEVILLE MAN SHOT. Columbus, O., Feb. 23.—D. H. Levens of Circleville, shot himself in the head at the Hotel Norwich. Levens had been in a private sanatorium here, and recovered at the Norwich Saturday. He cannot recover.

Mr. W. L. S. Smith, of Newark, has been in the business of selling and repairing watches for over sixty years. He is now 70 years of age, and has been in the business since he was 10 years old. He is a well known and respected citizen of Newark, and has been in the business since he was 10 years old. He is a well known and respected citizen of Newark, and has been in the business since he was 10 years old.

WALL STREET

OPPOSES EXTRA SESSION AND STATEHOOD BILL

May be Accepted by Republicans, Who Propose Compromise to Democratic Senators.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Behind the closed doors of the Senate in executive session the negotiations for a compromise on statehood between the Republican factions seem to have made much progress, reaching such a stage that they were enabled to make proposals to the Democrats which many of the latter regard with favor. The greatest anxiety for the compromise now seems to be felt among the administration senators, on whom the protests against an extra session of Congress coming from the big financial and commercial interests have had a marked effect. The administration, notwithstanding its repeated declarations that an extra session would be called unless certain things were done, does not care to have Congress on its hands into the summer, and it has therefore advised an arrangement with the advocates of statehood on the best basis that can be obtained, short of the immediate admission of three States as provided in the omnibus bill. In fact the administration and its friends in the Senate have in a way made offers tantamount to a surrender, which result is largely due to the determined attitude of the Democrats, who have declared that they were quite willing to take the responsibility of an extra session, believing it would be a good thing for the tariff, trusts and kindred topics could be more fully discussed than it had been possible to discuss this session. Senator Quay also let the anti-statehood Republicans understand clearly that extra session threats had no terror for him.

In discussion of a way out of the statehood tangle, a new feature was the suggestion that the bill to be passed should provide for the ultimate creation of four States, instead of three. Two states are to be provided for immediately, to be made up of Arizona and New Mexico as one and Oklahoma and Indian Territory as the other. In the bill will be incorporated provisions whereby Arizona may be set apart from its partner and Indian Territory from Oklahoma when certain specified conditions are fulfilled. These conditions in the first case will relate exclusively to population. While in the second allotment of land in severalty to the Indians will figure as well as population. If the negotiation the suggestion was that Arizona and New Mexico should be separated when the first has a population of 300,000 and the second a population of 500,000. But it is believed that finally the figure to be fixed will be reduced considerably below these minimums—say 250,000 or 225,000 for Arizona and 300,000 for New Mexico. These proposals, as already stated, would receive with favor by the Democrats, but nothing definite has as yet been agreed on between the Republican factions on one side and the Republicans and Democrats on the other.

But the feeling is strong that the matter will take definite shape and an all around agreement be reached on a compromise bill which will end the deadlock in the Senate. Even with this there will have to be the liveliest sort of hustling to get the appropriation bills through before March 4, while it is not believed positively that the treaties can be dealt with.

This will necessitate an extra session of the Senate to act on them. In the compromise, it is provided that the State to be composed of New Mexico and Arizona, shall be called Montezuma.

Senator Spooner was entrusted with the legal questions involved, especially in regard to the rights of the Indian tribes in Indian territory. The Wisconsin senator has been in consultation with the attorney general and other law officers of the Government familiar with the subject, and the bill when drawn will be based upon information which Senator Spooner obtains.

Senator Spooner reported to his colleagues that there were no legal difficulties in the way of admitting Oklahoma and afterward admitting Indian Territory to the State. In this connection there is a proposition to have included in the legislation a provision for a trust school fund for Indian territory to be provided by the Government.
